

Chapter 4 study guide

What is a hypothesis?

- Hypothesis is to assume or logical guesses about how events take place through experimental science

What is Theory?

- The theory is a model with substantial evidence from multiple supportive investigation.

What is a Dependent variable?

- The dependent variable is the observed factor

What is an independent variable?

- Independent variable is the factor manipulated by the investigator

What is passive transport?

- passive transport, which does not require energy; examples include simple diffusion, facilitated diffusion, and osmosis.

What is active transport?

- active transport requires energy to move molecules across the cell membrane; active transport includes the sodium-potassium pump, endocytosis, and exocytosis

What are saturated fats? and unsaturated fats? Provide an example for each.

- saturated fats have no double bonds between carbon atoms in their fatty acid chains, making them solid at room temperature; most saturated fats come from animal sources like meat and dairy.

What is unsaturated fat?

- unsaturated fats have at least one double bond, causing them to be liquid at room temperature; most unsaturated fats are found in plant-based oils like olive oil and avocado oil

What are trans fatty acids?

- unhealthy fats that can increase the risk of heart disease and other health problems
TFAs are unsaturated fatty acids that can be produced industrially or found naturally in some foods. They are created through a process called hydrogenation, which adds hydrogen to vegetable oils to make them solid at room temperature

Study Guide and Workbook to Accompany Zimbardo and Weber's Psychology, Second Edition Peter C. Gram,Philip G. Zimbardo,1997 Psychology Third Edition builds upon the experience and reputations of Phil Zimbardo and Ann Weber with the addition of a new co author Bob Johnson who has a wealth of teaching experience at the community college level This briefer less expensive book presents psychology in a meaningful manageable format that focuses on the key questions and core concepts of psychology Introductory psychology covers such a wide range of topics and issues that it becomes difficult for readers to see the forest for the trees To make key psychological concepts more meaningful the authors found inspiration in a classic chess study This study showed that experts did no better than novices at remembering the location of pieces on a chess board when they were placed randomly Only when the patterns represented actual game situations did they make sense and therefore become more easily memorable for the experts Clearly meaningful patterns are easier to remember and understand than random arrangements and Psychology applies this by presenting the field of psychology in meaningful patterns to enhance comprehension These concepts are then applied to readers own lives study skills and the world around them Finally Psychology integrates a cross cultural and multicultural perspective to make psychology meaningful for everyone For anyone interested in Introductory Psychology
