Background: In 1986, the first case of HIV was reported in the United States. Since then, the number of people living with HIV has increased significantly. In 2010, there were approximately 36.5 million people living with HIV worldwide. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that about 25 million people are currently living with HIV. The number of people living with HIV is expected to increase further in the coming years.

Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a leading cause of nosocomial infections and is highly resistant to many antibiotics. S. aureus strains are often associated with the use of medical devices, such as catheters, ventilators, and endotracheal tubes. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the nasal flora of patients in a hospital ward. A total of 100 patients were sampled, and 50% were found to be colonized with S. aureus. The majority of the isolates were susceptible to all antibiotics tested, except for methicillin and vancomycin. These results suggest that S. aureus is a common pathogen in the hospital setting and that patients are at risk of colonization with this organism. Further studies are needed to determine the role of S. aureus in nosocomial infections and to develop strategies to prevent colonization.
