Countertransference and the Therapist's Inner Experience Charles J. Gelso,Jeffrey Hayes,2007-02-15

Countertransference and the Therapist's Inner Experience explores the inner world of the psychotherapist and its influences on the relationship between psychotherapist and patient. This relationship is a major element determining the success of psychotherapy in addition to determining how and to what extent psychotherapy works with each individual patient. Authors Charles J. Gelso and Jeffrey A. Hayes present the history and current status of countertransference, offer a theoretically integrative conception and focus on how psychotherapists can manage countertransference in a way that benefits the therapeutic process. The book contains completely up-to-date data from existing research findings and illuminates the universality of countertransference across all psychotherapies and psychotherapists. Contents include the operation of countertransference across three predominant theory clusters in psychotherapy, leading factors involved in the management of countertransference and valuable recommendations for psychotherapy practitioners and researchers. Professionals in clinical and counseling psychology, psychiatry, social work and counseling will benefit from this volume. The book is also appropriate for graduate students in these fields.

A Gestalt Therapist's Guide Through the Depressive Field Jan Roubal,2024-11-28 This book is intended for psychotherapists working with depressed clients. In particular, it focuses on how working with depressed clients affects the therapists themselves and elaborates on how therapists can care for themselves in such demanding work to prevent burnout or process it meaningfully as part of their professional development. Based on the results of the author's own long-term experience, qualitative research and theoretical concepts describing psychopathology from the humanistic existential perspective of Gestalt therapy, this book describes a paradoxical way of working in which therapists transform their own experience in the presence of a depressed client. Using the example of working with depression, the book introduces how the field theory approach can be used in clinical practice. The book provides a conceptual framework, practical skills and case examples illustrating what a field theory approach brings new to the table. This will be a useful guide for psychotherapists and Gestalt therapists who regularly come into contact with depressive clients as well as for therapists who are themselves experiencing professional exhaustion and are at risk of reaching burnout.

Most often the focus is not on the motives for suicide nor on the phenomenology of this act but on what is found from small cohorts of suicidal individuals. This book offers a tentative synthesis of a complex phenomenon and sheds some light on models of suicide that are less frequently encountered in the literature. Written by international experts it makes a valuable contribution to the field of suicidology that appeals to a wide readership from mental health professionals to researchers in suicidology and students. The Real Relationship in Psychotherapy Charles J. Gelso, 2011. The concept of the real or personal relationship between client and therapist has existed since the earliest days of psychotherapy. In this engaging book Charles J. Gelso argues the case for the relevance of the real relationship to successful therapeutic outcomes. Helping Skills Clara E. Hill, 2009. With this third edition of Helping Skills respected clinician and researcher Clara Hill has revised and updated her popular textbook continuing her comprehensive exploration of empirically supported basic helping skills for undergraduate and first year graduate students. Following Hill's well established three stage model of helping (Exploration, Insight, and Action) the text presents an integrative approach that is grounded in client centered psychoanalytic and cognitive behavioral theory. Hill's model recognizes the critical roles of affect, cognition, and behavior in the process of change filling a void left by textbooks that focus more narrowly on the processes facilitating change. The text includes many student friendly features and provides in depth information on the theoretical foundation of the three stage model of helping, the different goals used in each stage (e.g. attending and listening, restatement, challenge, self disclosure, and feedback), the general principles of ethical conduct and strategies for resolving ethical dilemmas, numerous practice exercises, labs, and Web forms that illustrate and help evaluate the complex interaction between client and helper and how students can intervene most effectively from moment to moment based on their intentions and the client's reactions. New material for this edition includes a revised approach to the three stage model emphasizing goals and tasks of the stages and the ability to traverse among the stages in a helper-client relationship, more attention to multicultural issues, and better delineation of steps of the Action stage for four discrete tasks (relaxation, behavioral change, behavioral rehearsal, and decision making). With her accessible yet instructive style, Hill instills

The incapacity to mourn and ultimately let go of pathological introjects and identifications is linked to an unconscious need to protect early objects against unfavorable perceptions and associated affective reactions. A failure to attain maturational momentum from a more adequate process of mourning object relational integration and psychic healing results from these pathological protectiveness reactions. Common forms of character pathology and resistances can be viewed as resulting from an excessive need to protect early pathological objects. The extreme stuckness and repetitively unsatisfying behavior patterns of many characterologically disturbed patients can be alleviated via an intensive form of resistance analysis focusing upon the reluctance to experience positive affects and the
