Dependent Communities:

Fishing-Dependent Communities on the Gulf Coast of Florida Yu Huang, 2004-02-12 U S fisheries legislation requires National Marine Fisheries Service NMFS to attend to the critical social and economic issues surrounding the definition and identification of fishing communities and to the effects that changes to the physical environment and regulatory decisions can have on such communities To fulfil their mandate National Marine Fisheries Service NMFS sponsored the research entitled Identifying Fishing Communities in the Gulf of Mexico to study the economic social and cultural status of potential fishing communities along the Gulf of Mexico NMFS contracted the research project to Impact Assessment Inc to study 80 plus potential fishing communities in the Florida Gulf Coast I worked as an intern in the research and visited the communities with other team members The task of our project was to provide NMFS with basic profiles of fishing communities for NMFS to develop a culturally appropriated intervention Research methods include Rapid Assessment Procedures RAP semi structured key informant interviews participant observation and archival and secondary research mainly for community histories Apart from my internship research I also conducted some additional interviews and observations for my thesis My findings indicate that fishing communities along the Florida Gulf Coast encounter with challenge from increased regulation dumping seafood imports and virtually uncontrolled waterfront development By a comparison of three groups of fishing communities i e diminished communities residual communities and resilient communities the thesis explores how communities respond to the challenges and encourages fishermen to take action to preserve their generation long fishing tradition In conclusion the thesis suggests that a solution to ease the decline of fishing communities requires cooperation of all parties concerned including the fishery regulatory agency commercial fishermen and the federal and local government

A diagnostic on social protection needs and opportunities for forest-dependent communities in the United Republic of Tanzania Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2018-07-12 This study is aimed at gaining an understanding of the poverty and vulnerability situation of forest dependent communities in the United Republic of Tanzania and generating information on the availability of social protection interventions with a view to identifying pathways for establishing sustainable social protection for these communities Social protection is taken to include all initiatives both formal and informal that provide social assistance to extremely poor individuals and households social services to groups who need special care or would otherwise be denied access to basic services social insurance to protect people against the risks and consequences of livelihood shocks and social equity to protect people against social risks such as discrimination and abuse Devereux and Sabates Wheeler 2008

Climate Change Adaptation and Forest Dependent Communities Jyotish Prakash Basu, 2017-03-27 This book addresses the livelihood impacts of climate change vulnerability and adaptation measures on the forest dependent communities of India Research presented here focuses on three different agro climatic areas of West Bengal namely the coastal Sundarban the drought prone region and the mountainous region Readers will discover the main climate induced vulnerabilities that affect livelihoods of forest communities understand how to evaluate the expected impacts of climate change at different levels under different climate change scenarios and be able to assess and measure the implied major social environmental and economic impacts Particular attention is also given to the role of the Indian governmental policy including national forest policy of 1988 to reduce climate related vulnerabilities Chapters also highlight two main approaches to vulnerability assessment in socio ecological systems The first is the impact based approach which assesses the potential impacts of climate change on forest dependent people The second is the vulnerability based approach which assesses social sensitivity and adaptive capacity to respond to stresses Development practitioners government implementing agencies and researchers in environmental science and policy will find this book appealing

Transition towards an ecosystem approach to fisheries in the Mediterranean Sea

Vasconcellos, M., Unal, V. (eds.), 2022-01-18 FAO has promoted the ecosystem approach to fisheries EAF as an appropriate framework for the sustainable development and management of fisheries worldwide With a view to contribute to the identification of lessons and good practices for EAF implementation this publication documents nine case studies that attempted to put into practice some of the key principles and tools of the approach in the Mediterranean Sea The case studies were selected to cover a broad range of contexts including smallscale and industrial fisheries operating at local national and sub regional scales It was not within the scope of the publication to evaluate the level of implementation of the ecosystem approach A specific tool for monitoring implementation is proposed and exemplified Case studies were analysed with a view to draw preliminary lessons regarding the enabling factors that facilitated the progress made as well as the challenges faced in the transition towards EAF based management systems Attention is drawn to key enabling conditions such as favourable policies legislation and regulatory frameworks the existence of regional mechanisms for cooperation favourable market dynamics and social processes and the relatively low complexity of the fishery systems analysed A set of factors emerged that contributed to progress during implementation such as the clear definition of fishing rights the enhancement of mechanisms for compliance scientific monitoring and adaptation of management measures as well as the explicit consideration of biological and socioeconomic aspects in management actions Further progress in the transition towards sustainable management systems is hampered by external and internal factors External factors are related for instance to environmental changes the poor regulation and control of competing sectors consumer behaviour and the governance environment Issues such as stakeholder representation knowledge gaps and the availability of sustainable sources of funding are among common internal factors The authors also discuss how slow progress in the implementation of management plans can generate discredit with the institutions and add additional challenges for any future initiatives to engage stakeholders in participatory management The case based results and lessons of how the ecosystem approach to fisheries was considered developed and implemented in the fisheries discussed in this publication not only contribute to the documentation of current practices in the Mediterranean but may also guide future attempts to further develop the field

Ecosystem approach to fisheries implementation monitoring tool Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2021-08-16 The implementation of an ecosystem approach to fisheries EAF contributes to sustainable fisheries in various ways The EAF Nansen Programme has assisted several countries to understand adopt and use an ecosystem approach in the management of their marine and coastal fisheries The ecosystem approach to fisheries implementation monitoring tool EAF IMT is a tool for decision support and planning in the fisheries management process It can be used by countries in strategic and operational planning processes for their fisheries assisting them to determine where they are making acceptable progress and where there continue to be gaps and difficulties to address Well-being in
