

8. Formula for Poisson Distribution:-

$$P(X = x) = \frac{\lambda^x e^{-\lambda}}{x!}$$

Where;

- $P(X = x)$  = Probability of exactly (x) occurrences in a given interval
- $\lambda$  (lambda) = mean number of occurrences during interval
- x = number of occurrences desired
- e = base of the natural logarithm

Note:-

Mean of a Poisson Distribution

$$\mu = \lambda$$

Standard Deviation of a Poisson Distribution

$$\sigma = \sqrt{\lambda}$$

Methods in Applied Chemistry Jurand Czermiński, 1990 Statistical Methods in Applied Chemistry deals in detail with the methods of statistical description and inference which are applied to chemical experimentation. It introduces the reader to the problems of random variables and their distributions, reviews principal statistical tests both parametric and nonparametric, presents basic models of variance analysis and deals with correlation of phenomena. The material is presented from the viewpoint of the experimenter. All methods are illustrated by numerical examples which reflect genuine experimental situations. Useful for students and teachers at universities and polytechnics the book is of interest to scientists in all fields of pure and applied chemistry. Moreover it will be invaluable for researchers in all experimental sciences where statistical methods can be used.

Written by engineers for engineers the examples and exercises are engineering based, containing real data. And because computers are used to apply statistical methods to solve problems, output is presented from Statgraphics and SAS to illustrate what can be done with modern statistical software. Readers will master discrete and continuous random variables and probability distributions, point and interval estimation, testing hypotheses, simple and multiple linear regression, design of experiments, nonparametric statistics and statistical quality control.

It is concise, complete and engaging. Probably it is not suitable as a primary course resource both because it covers too much material and that in too brief a fashion to play such a role. On the other hand it would make a dandy supplemental work for any course outside a mathematics department that uses statistical methods.
