Paragraph II

The wind carried the radioactive cloud over large parts of Europe, as far away as Scandinavia and England. Over 55,000 square miles (about 142,449 square kilometers) were contaminated, but 70% of the radiation settled on nearby Belarus, which has since suffered hundreds of billions of dollars in damage.

Some scientists (5) _____ that more than 200,000 people have died since 1986 as a result of the accident, and another 100,000 deaths from cancer may occur in the coming years. Others think that these numbers are much smaller. Over five million people still live in contaminated areas, and their health may be (6) _____ from eating contaminated food, such as fish from the rivers, mushrooms and berries from the forests, and meat or milk from cattle and sheep that graze on the land. Some even believe that the accident (7) _____ to the collapse of the Soviet Union.

In 2010, workers from 27 countries began building a new structure over the damaged reactor to prevent further contamination.

One positive outcome of this disaster is that the safety of nuclear power plants has (10) _____. Many nations now have strict safeguards and codes in place to prevent similar accidents.
