We propose here a comprehensive educational program based on the best available evidence to date drawn from recent publications intended to impart the knowledge skills and abilities necessary for the role of crisis manager We expect this program to enhance the intercultural and interagency performance across the Disaster Management DM cycle Here Intercultural does not refer to different nations and cultural backgrounds but rather to working cultures within diverse agencies Since communication and information shortcomings are the most common reason for failed DM this educational program focuses heavily on collaboration and interoperability between trained professionals involved in disaster response to ensure that they understand the need for collaboration and are aware of each other's limitations and possibilities The aim of programs such as this is not to re educate people in respect to their profession area of expertise but rather to train them in elements specific to DM and ways in which they can apply their existing knowledge and professional expertise in the disaster context Such multidisciplinary programs cover all disaster phases accommodate the needs of each organization and offer a safe environment where participants are able to learn by doing in an interactive environment vertically within their own organization and horizontally together with other organizations by focusing on shared training cooperation and intercultural understanding Such programs bring some degree of standardization and offer a thorough evaluation of participants and the program by using evidence based scientific methods One important part of the program is to offer a standardized handbook in which all necessary information is gathered This is not intended as a substitute for reference books but it is intended to make the information accessible and easy to learn so that the information can be combined with the practical parts of the education

Smith, 2010 Large scale disaster response operations are complex events that involve multiple jurisdictions and multiple agencies in preparedness response and recovery efforts In the aftermath of the attacks of September 11 2001 the United States sought to develop a national model for managing disaster response operations The result of those efforts was the creation of the National Incident Management System NIMS in 2004 In 2005

the Gulf Coast of the United States experienced Hurricane Katrina This disaster provided the first real world opportunity to employ NIMS and assess its ability in providing an effective framework for response and recovery operations Post event analysis revealed that few saw the response and recovery efforts as effective subsequently NIMS was revised in 2008 This study focused on the experiences of past incident commanders to gather a better understanding of the phenomenon of command and control of large scale multi agency disaster response operations This phenomenological study identified seven themes and their interdependencies seen by past leaders of disaster response operations as being key factors in establishing effective command and control of large scale disaster response operations This knowledge serves to inform current disaster response operations under NIMS and provides insights of potential areas requiring future revisions

Disaster Operations and Decision Making Roger C. Huder, 2013-01-22 The only book to combine emergency management principles with proven military concepts Good disaster plans do not guarantee a good response Any disaster plan rarely survives the first rain bands of a hurricane or the first tremors of an earthquake While developing plans is essential there must be systems in place to adapt these plans to the ever changing operational environment of a disaster Currently there is no set of standard disaster response principles to guide a community The National Incident Management System NIMS and the Incident Command System ICS provide the framework to implement operational decisions but they were never designed as operational concepts The military has developed just such concepts and many of them can be adapted for civilian use Disaster Operations and Decision Making adapts those military concepts and combines them with disaster lessons learned to create a new operational paradigm Emphasizing team building Emergency Operations Center operational systems and situational awareness the book details easily adopted methods All of these methods are designed to be incorporated into the NIMS and ICS framework to enhance a community's response to any type of disaster Disaster Operations and Decision Making is an essential resource for emergency managers fire chiefs law enforcement officers homeland security professionals public health officials and anyone else involved or interested in crisis management The Role of the Military in Disaster Relief Operations ,2012
