Calendar December 2016

Abate, Gashaw T., Bernard, Tanguy

Calendar December 2016:

Women, Writing and Religion in England and Beyond, 650-1100 Diane Watt, 2019-12-12 Women's literary histories usually start in the later Middle Ages but recent scholarship has shown that actually women were at the heart of the emergence of the English literary tradition Women Writing and Religion in England and Beyond 650-1100 focuses on the period before the so-called Barking Renaissance of women's writing in the 12th century. By examining the surviving evidence of women's authorship as well as the evidence of women's engagement with literary culture more widely, Diane Watt argues that early women's writing was often lost, suppressed, or deliberately destroyed. In particular, she considers the different forms of male overwriting to which she ascribes the multiple connotations of destruction, preservation, control, and suppression. She uses the term to describe the complex relationship between male authors and their female subjects to capture the ways in which texts can attempt to control and circumscribe female autonomy. Written by one of the leading experts in medieval women's writing, Women Writing and Religion in England and Beyond 650-1100 examines women's literary engagement in monasteries such as Ely, Whitby, Barking, and Wilton Abbey, as well as letters and hagiographies from the 8th and 9th centuries. Diane Watt provides a much-needed look at women's writing in the early medieval period that is crucial to understanding women's literary history more broadly. Vadophil Prashant H. Pandya, 2017-05-30 Farmers' quality assessment of their crops and its impact on commercialization behavior: A field experiment in Ethiopia Abate, Gashaw T., Bernard, Tanguy, 2017-03-24 Adoption of quality-enhancing technologies is often driven largely by farmers' expected returns from these technologies. Without proper grades, standards, and certification systems, however, farmers may remain uncertain about the actual financial return associated with their quality-enhancing investments. This report summarizes the outcomes of a short video-based randomized training intervention on wheat quality measurement and collective marketing among 15,000 wheat farmers in Ethiopia. Our results suggest that the intervention led to significant changes in farmers' commercialization behaviors; namely, it prompted farmers to adopt behaviors geared toward assessing their wheat's quality using easily implementable test weight measures, assessing the accuracy of the equipment used by buyers in their kebeles, scales, in particular, and contacting more than one buyer before concluding a sale. The training also led to improvements in share of output sold, price received, and collective marketing, albeit with important limitations. First, farmers who measured their wheat quality received a higher price, but only if their wheat was of higher quality. Second, farmers who found that their wheat was of higher quality were more reluctant to aggregate their wheat than those who found that their wheat was of lower quality. Lastly, the training intervention led to better use of fertilizer in the following season. Our discovery that a short training intervention can significantly change farmers' marketing and production behavior should encourage the development of further interventions aimed at enhancing farmers' adoption of improved technologies and commercialization. Rabies Symptoms, Diagnosis,
