This book promotes the development of linguistic databases by describing a number of successful database projects focusing especially on cross-linguistic and typological research. It has become increasingly clear that ready access to knowledge about cross-linguistic variation is of great value to many types of linguistic research. Such a systematic body of data is essential in order to gain a proper understanding of what is truly universal in language and what is determined by specific cultural settings. Moreover, it is increasingly needed as a tool to systematically evaluate contrasting theoretical claims. The book includes a chapter on general problems of using databases to handle language data and chapters on a number of individual projects. Note: This title was originally announced as including a CD Rom with databases. The CD Rom, however, was replaced by a list of URLs within the book. More information as well as links to the databases can also be found here.

Artificial Intelligence in Design '98 John S. Gero, Fay Sudweeks, 2012-12-06. The development of computational models of design founded on the artificial intelligence paradigm has provided an impetus for much of current design research. As artificial intelligence has matured and developed new approaches, so the impact of these new approaches on design research has been felt. This can be seen in the way concepts from cognitive science have found their way into artificial intelligence and hence into design research. And also in the way in which agent-based systems are being incorporated into design systems. In design research there is an increasing blurring between notions drawn from artificial intelligence and those drawn from cognitive science Whereas a number of years ago the focus was largely on applying artificial intelligence to designing as an activity thus treating designing as a form of problem solving today we are seeing a much wider variety of conceptions of the role of artificial intelligence in helping to model and comprehend designing as a process Thus we see papers in this volume which have as their focus the development or implementation of frameworks for artificial intelligence in design attempting to determine a unique locus for these ideas We see papers which attempt to find foundations for the development of tools based on the artificial intelligence paradigm often the foundations come from cognitive studies of human designers
