The Alo Man Mara L. Pratt-Chadwick, 2017-11-16 Excerpt from The Alo Man Stories

From the Congo In Central Africa supper time is about Six o clock all the year round From one season to another night and day are nearly equal and the time of sunrise and of sunset changes hardly more than fifteen minutes throughout the year The year begins with the first heavy rain of the wet season and when the new green shoots come out on the spurge thickets the people know that the new year is at hand The evening meal is the most important one of the day sometimes the only regular meal Soon after sunrise on this particular day the women as usual had picked up their hoes their baskets and their babies and had gone out to work on the farms outside the village They had come back in the middle of the afternoon to begin preparing supper which was a matter of some hours work because there were so many different things to be done Grain for bread or mush had to be ground on heavy stone slabs vegetables must be made ready for cooking water Fetched from the spring wood brought and fires made Mpoko and Nkunda had helped a little and they knew where in a heap of hot ashes the sweet potatoes from their own corner of the field were baking There would be boiled fowl and cassava bread and maybe some stewed fruit About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
