Climate Change And Displacement Multidisciplinary Perspectives:

Climate Change and Displacement Jane McAdam, 2010-09-06 Environmental migration is not new Nevertheless the events and processes accompanying global climate change threaten to increase human movement both within states and across international borders The Inter governmental Panel on Climate Change has predicted an increased frequency and severity of climate events such as storms cyclones and hurricanes as well as longer term sea level rise and desertification which will impact upon people s ability to survive in certain parts of the world This book brings together a variety of disciplinary perspectives on the phenomenon of climate induced displacement With chapters by leading scholars in their field it collects in one place a rigorous holistic analysis of the phenomenon which can better inform academic understanding and policy development alike Governments have not been prepared to take a leading role in developing responses to the issue in large part due to the absence of strong theoretical frameworks from which sound policy can be constructed The specialist expertise of the authors in this book means that each chapter identifies key issues that need to be considered in shaping domestic regional and international responses including the complex causes of movement the conceptualisation of migration responses to climate change the terminology that should be used to describe those who move and attitudes to migration that may affect decisions to stay or leave The book will help to facilitate the creation of principled research based responses and establish climate induced displacement as an important aspect of both the climate change and global migration debates

Building the Critical Anthropology of Climate Change Hans A. Baer, Merrill Singer, 2024-08-14 This book applies a critical perspective to anthropogenic climate change and the global socio ecological crisis The book focuses on the critical anthropology of climate change by opening up a dialogue with the two main contending perspectives in the field namely the cultural ecological and the cultural interpretive perspectives Guided by these the authors take a firm stance on the types of changes that are needed to sustain life on Earth as we know it Within this framework they explore issues of climate and social equity the nature of the current era in Earth s geohistory the perspectives of the elite polluters driving climate change and the regrettable contributions of anthropologists and other scholars to climate change Engaging with perspectives from sociology political science and the geography of climate change the book explores various approaches to thinking about and responding to the existential threat of an ever warming climate In doing so it lays the foundation for a brave new sustainable world that is socially just highly democratic and climatically safe for humans and other species This book will be of interest to researchers and students studying environmental anthropology climate change human geography sociology and political science

Elgar Concise Encyclopedia of Migration and Asylum Law Vincent Chetail, 2025-07-15 This Concise Encyclopedia provides a comprehensive overview of the rapidly developing field of migration and asylum law It brings clarity on key terms and critical notions while challenging misconceptions in this highly politicized sphere

Climate Change, Forced Migration, and International Law Jane McAdam, 2012-02-23 This is a key study into whether climate change refugees are protected by international law It examines the reasons why people do or do not move how far climate change is a trigger for movement and whether traditional international responses such as creating new treaties and new institutions are appropriate solutions in this context

Facilitating the Resettlement and Rights of Climate Refugees Avidan Kent, Simon Behrman, 2018-03-26 One of the most significant impacts of climate change is migration Yet to date climate induced migrants are falling within what has been defined by some as a protection gap This book addresses this issue first by identifying precisely where the gap exists by reviewing the relevant legal tools that are available for those who are currently and who will in the future be displaced because of climate change The authors then address the relevant actors the identity of those deserving protection displaced individuals as well as other bearers of rights migration hosting states and obligations polluting states The authors also address head on the contentious topic of definitions concluding with the provocative assertion that the term climate refugees is indeed correct and should be relied upon The second part of the book looks to the future by advocating specific legal and institutional pathways Notably the authors support the use of international environmental law as the most adequate and suitable regime for the regulation of climate refugees With respect to the role of institutions the authors propose a model of cross governance through which a more inclusive and multi faceted protection regime could be achieved Addressing the regulation of climate refugees through a unique collaboration between a refugee lawyer and an environmental lawyer this book will be of great interest to scholars and professionals in fields including international law environmental studies refugee studies and international relations

Human Rights and Justice Melissa Labonte, Kurt Mills, 2018-06-27 The relationship between human rights and justice is significant deep and ultimately contested The two terms themselves human rights and justice have experienced both conceptual and operational pushback from many quarters in recent years Although an understanding of justice is inherent in broad human rights discourses there is no clear consensus on how to integrate and reconcile these concepts both as a means of advancing knowledge and as a mechanism for the development of sound and effective policy at the global regional and national levels Further expansions of the boundaries of both human rights and justice make any clear and settled understanding of the relation difficult to ascertain This volume tackles these issues in a coherent and complementary manner It examines a range of philosophical economic and social perspectives that are key to understanding the nature of the linkages between human rights and justice written by scholars who are at varying stages of their careers and whose ongoing work has sparked dialogue and exchange within and across these fields This work will be of interest to students and scholars of human rights international relations and ethics

The Irish Yearbook of International Law, Volume 6, 2011 Fiona de Londras, Siobhán Mullally, 2013-08-23 The Yearbook stimulates further research into Ireland's practice in international affairs and foreign policy filling a gap in existing legal scholarship and assisting in the dissemination of Irish thinking and practice on matters of international law

Statehood under Water Alejandra Torres Camprubí, 2016-07-11 In Statehood under Water Alejandra Torres Camprub

revisits the concept of statehood through an analysis on how sea level rise and the Anthropocene challenge the territorial demographical and political dimensions of the State Closely examining the fight for survival undertaken by low lying Pacific Island States the author engages with the legal and policy innovations necessary to address these new scenarios This monograph reacts against overly formal approaches to the law on statehood and is devoted to the reconstruction of the context in which both the challenges and the measures adopted to tackle them are taking place Progressively forged within the international community it is the kind of political and ethical framework that will soon inform the potential transformation of the law on statehood

Global Implications of Development,

Disasters and Climate Change Susanna Price, Jane Singer, 2015-08-11 Displacements in the Asia Pacific region are escalating

The region has for decades experienced more than half of the world's natural disasters and in recent years a disproportionately high share of extreme weather related disasters which displaced 19 million people in 2013 alone This volume offers an innovative and thought provoking Asia Pacific perspective on an intensifying global problem the forced displacement of people from their land homes and livelihoods due to development disasters and environmental change This book draws together theoretical and multidisciplinary perspectives with diverse case studies from around the region including China's Three Gorges Reservoir Japan's Fukushima disaster and the Pacific's Banaba resettlement Focusing on responses to displacement in the context of power asymmetries and questions of the public interest the book highlights shared experiences of displacement seeking new approaches and solutions that have potential global application This book shows how displaced peoples respond to interlinked impacts that unravel their social fabric and productive bases whether through sporadic protest organised campaigns empowered mobility or even community based negotiation of resettlement solutions The volume will be of great interest to researchers and postgraduate students in development studies environmental and climate change studies anthropology sociology human geography international law and human rights

Climate Change, Migration and Human Rights Dimitra

Manou, Andrew Baldwin, Dug Cubie, Anja Mihr, Teresa Thorp, 2017-05-12 Climate Change already having serious impacts on the lives of millions of people across the world These impacts are not only ecological but also social economic and legal Among the most significant of such impacts is climate change induced migration The implications of this on human rights raise pressing questions which require serious scholarly reflection Drawing together experts in this field Climate Change Migration and Human Rights offers a fresh perspective on human rights law and policy issues in the climate change regime by examining the interrelationships between various aspects of human rights climate change and migration Three key themes are explored understanding the concepts of human dignity human rights and human security the theoretical nexus between human rights climate change and migration or displacement and the practical implications and challenges for lawyers and policy makers of protecting human dignity in the face of climate change and displacement The book also includes a series of case studies from Alaska Bangladesh Kenya and the Pacific islands which aim to improve our understanding of the theoretical and practical implications of climate change for human rights and migration This book will be of great interest to scholars of environmental law and policy human rights law climate change and migration and refugee studies

Climate and Culture Giuseppe Feola,Hilary Geoghegan,Alex Arnall,2019-09-30 How does culture interact with the way societies understand live with and act in relation to climate change While the importance of the exchanges between culture society and climate in the context of global environmental change is increasingly recognised the empirical evidence is fragmented and too often constrained by disciplinary boundaries Written by an international team of experts this book provides cutting edge and critical perspectives on how culture both facilitates and inhibits our ability to address and make sense of climate change and the challenges it poses to societies globally Through a set of case studies spanning the social sciences and humanities it explores the role of culture in relation to climate and its changes at different temporal and spatial levels illustrates how approaching climate change through the cultural dimension enriches the range and depth of societal engagements and establishes connections between theory and practice which can stimulate action oriented initiatives
