The mammalian system is reviewed in the context of environmental oncology and species-specific aspects of environmental chain reactions. It orders the constituting logical framework for man as a focal point of a comparative oncology. Selected examples of neoplastic progression in various taxonomic groups are reviewed. The development of neoplasms among the species units are provided, beginning with the opposite pole of cancers, which have become much more common as a result of man's taxonomic development. The vascular plants, where no impact on the environment is observed, are reviewed in the latter chapters. The metastasis of malignant neoplasms occurs.
