Abstract. The purpose of this study is to investigate the relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of the mobile phone in the workplace. The study is based on a survey of 1000 employees in the Norwegian public sector. The results show that the use of the Internet and the mobile phone are both increasing in the workplace. The use of the Internet is more common than the use of the mobile phone. The use of the Internet is more common among those who are younger, have a higher education, and work in the private sector. The use of the mobile phone is more common among those who are older, have a lower education, and work in the public sector. The use of the Internet and the mobile phone are both related to the use of other information technologies in the workplace. The use of the Internet is more strongly related to the use of other information technologies than the use of the mobile phone. The use of the Internet and the mobile phone are both related to the use of other information technologies in the workplace. The use of the Internet is more strongly related to the use of other information technologies than the use of the mobile phone.
