

Prokaryotes

Prokaryotes are single-celled microorganisms that are structurally and functionally simpler than eukaryotes. In prokaryotes there are no organelles, the nucleus and membrane that surround the cell are not well developed and the cell is not divided into compartments. Bacteria are the most common and the largest group of prokaryotes. They are unicellular organisms with prokaryotic cell membranes and they are found in almost all environments. Prokaryotes are the most abundant and diverse group of living organisms. They are found in almost all environments, in everything from space to deep sea vents and even in the human body. In fact, all the microorganisms that live in and on our bodies are prokaryotes.

Structure and Function

1. Name the prokaryotic cell wall components and the membrane that surrounds the cell. Name the organelles and structures found in the cell that are involved in energy production.

Structure and Function

Prokaryotic cell wall components:
Peptidoglycan
Murein
Glycocalyx
Sugars
Protein
Nucleic acid
Carbohydrates

Membrane components:
Phospholipid bilayer
Protein
Cholesterol
Carbohydrates
Protein

2. List membrane transport mechanisms.

Passive transport: If there are no barriers to movement, molecules move down their concentration gradient. Molecules move from an area of high concentration to an area of low concentration in order to balance it.

Passive transport is often passive diffusion or passive osmosis. It is used when there are no barriers to movement.

Facilitated diffusion: If there are barriers to movement, molecules move down their concentration gradient.

Active transport: If there are barriers to movement, molecules move up their concentration gradient.

Active transport is often active transport or active osmosis. It is used when there are barriers to movement.

3. List prokaryotic cell wall components and the membrane that surrounds the cell.

Prokaryotic cell wall components:

1. Bacteria, archaea, and eukaryotes all have membranes. These are prokaryotic in prokaryotes. The prokaryotic cell membrane is a phospholipid bilayer.
