1. Probability Theory (Ch. 13) - Probability is the study of the likelihood of events occurring. It is a branch of mathematics that deals with the analysis of random events.
2. Random Events - Events that occur randomly, without any predictable pattern. Examples include the outcome of a coin toss or the roll of a die.
3. Probability Distribution - A function that describes the likelihood of various outcomes of a random event. It is a graph or table showing the probability of each possible outcome.
4. Expected Value - The average value of a random variable, calculated by multiplying each outcome by its probability and summing the results.
5. Variance - A measure of the spread or dispersion of a random variable. It is calculated as the average of the squared deviations from the expected value.
6. Standard Deviation - The square root of the variance, representing the average distance of the outcomes from the expected value.

7. Normal Distribution - A probability distribution that is symmetric and bell-shaped. It is the most common type of probability distribution and is used to model many natural phenomena.
8. Central Limit Theorem - A theorem that states that the distribution of the sample mean of a large number of independent, identically distributed random variables will be approximately normal, regardless of the shape of the original distribution.
9. Binomial Distribution - A probability distribution that models the number of successes in a fixed number of independent trials, each with a constant probability of success.
10. Poisson Distribution - A probability distribution that models the number of events occurring in a fixed interval of time or space, given a constant average rate of occurrence.

11. Chi-Square Test - A statistical test used to determine if there is a significant difference between the observed and expected frequencies of a categorical variable.
12. F-Test - A statistical test used to compare the variances of two populations. It is based on the ratio of the sample variances.
13. t-Test - A statistical test used to compare the means of two populations. It is based on the ratio of the difference in sample means to the standard error of the difference.
14. ANOVA - Analysis of Variance, a statistical test used to compare the means of three or more populations. It is based on the ratio of the between-group variance to the within-group variance.

15. Regression Analysis - A statistical method used to model the relationship between a dependent variable and one or more independent variables. It is used to predict the value of the dependent variable based on the values of the independent variables.

16. Correlation Coefficient - A measure of the strength and direction of the linear relationship between two variables. It ranges from -1 to 1, where -1 indicates a perfect negative correlation and 1 indicates a perfect positive correlation.

17. Confidence Interval - A range of values that is likely to contain the true value of a population parameter. It is calculated based on the sample mean and the standard error of the mean.

18. Hypothesis Testing - A statistical method used to test a claim or hypothesis about a population parameter. It involves comparing the sample data to a null hypothesis and determining if there is enough evidence to reject it.
19. Significance Level - The probability of rejecting the null hypothesis when it is actually true. It is denoted by the Greek letter alpha (α) and is typically set at 0.05.
20. Power of a Test - The probability of correctly rejecting the null hypothesis when it is false. It is denoted by the Greek letter beta (β) and is typically set at 0.80.

21. Bayesian Inference - A statistical method used to update the probability of a hypothesis being true based on new evidence. It is based on Bayes' theorem, which relates the conditional and marginal probabilities of random events.

22. Markov Chains - A stochastic process that moves from one state to another according to a set of probabilities. It is used to model systems that change over time, such as weather patterns or stock prices.

23. Monte Carlo Simulation - A statistical method used to model the behavior of a system by generating random samples from a probability distribution. It is used to estimate the values of complex functions and to analyze the risk of investment decisions.

24. Queueing Theory - A branch of operations research that studies the behavior of waiting lines. It is used to design and optimize systems where resources are limited, such as traffic flow, computer networks, and service centers.

25. Game Theory - A branch of mathematics that studies strategic decision-making. It is used to analyze the behavior of individuals and organizations in situations where the outcome depends on the actions of multiple players.
