

Coast Poets Society

Coast Poets Society explores the conflict between realism and romanticism as these contrasting ideas are presented to the students at an off-beat preparatory school. Weston Academy is founded on traditional and conventional and is, even on a superficial level, structured because presided by the strict, old-people administrator. With the starting of each new semester, hundreds of parents abandon their cars, leaving them to the local hands of Western staff to hope that they will never return and leave. When a replacement English teacher arrives, what happens to her is Weston alumni, he brings with him a passion for teaching romanticism, thus opening a new horizon (new world) to his students. The story is predominantly viewed through the eyes of Todd Anderson, a teenager in Western, and his roommate Ned Perry.

Todd is painfully shy and terrified that what he might say is insignificant and meaningless. This is particularly disturbing to him since he is repeatedly told that he has "big shoes to fill" being the younger brother of a former publication.

Ned, on the other hand, is bright and full of ambition, which is unfortunately squashed by his overbearing & authoritarian controlling father. Mr. Perry shares every detail of his own life including extra-curricular activities, future plans, and specifically what is planned of him.

The new English teacher when starting begins his teachings with a Harvard lecture on their romantic deaths, explaining to the students that their lives are fleeting so they should seize the day to make their lives count, to leave a legacy of "poetic bloom." He continues his teaching by instructing the class to try and fill pages of their books which describe a scientific way to determine the greatness of poetry. His teacher shows the class of their romantic poets such as Keats and Lord Byron and explains to them how to avoid the dangers of romanticism and the power of words as a way which human beings push each other to excel. Amidst these scientific lectures, the students, intrigued with their new teacher, learn that he was a member of the Coast Poets Society. When asked, Nedding describes glorious moments of meeting poets, but seems there no longer about the idea. Nevertheless, this repeatedly visit off campus to examine their own version of the Coast Poets Society. Todd is allowed to attend as an observer since he does not want to read aloud. He keeps minutes of the meetings. Throughout these meetings, each character is able to develop his own romantic or poetic version. The shocking clash between realism and romanticism begins to unfold when Charles Cathon posts an obnoxious article in the school news in the name of the Coast Poets. The administration is appalled and begins an investigation.

Meanwhile, Ned's Overstreet falls madly in love with a girl who is practically engaged to the son of his parent's friend. He pursues her relentlessly, driven by romantic ideas, in the face of the threat on his life by her boyfriend.

Ned notices that his real passion in life is writing and proceeds to lead the way off track as a fifteen-year-old boy's dream of the local shadow. He begins to write a longed wish of acceptance by trying to convince his father that living to Mr. Anderson when his father finds out and demands the quit the day. Feeling trapped, after his final performance and a startling reaction, he takes his own life. This horrific passage is shown through the hallway in unexpected halls of Western, applying more pressure to the Coast Poets. When Mr. and Mrs. Perry demand a thorough investigation, Western administration asks the Coast Poets Society, which they determined as the
