Abstract: Staphylococcus aureus is a common cause of nosocomial infection and is often resistant to multiple antibiotics. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the nasal flora of patients in a tertiary care hospital and to determine the antibiotic resistance patterns of the isolates. A total of 100 patients were screened for S. aureus in the nasal flora. The isolates were tested for sensitivity to various antibiotics. The results showed that 60% of the patients had S. aureus in their nasal flora. The isolates were resistant to 100% of the antibiotics tested, including methicillin, vancomycin, and teicoplanin. This study highlights the importance of infection control measures in the hospital setting.

Radiation suffered by other Truman administration officers and Congressmen	Congressman passed the United States Atomic Energy Act which gave government authority to plan's future of atomic development, scientific research, production, its control, its distribution, its utilization, its disposal, its transportation, its storage, its security, its safety, its health, its environment, its impact on the public, its effect on the economy, its effect on the world.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle, while the training group participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Endometriosis affected by aromatase-inhibitor treatment (e.g. letrozole, anastrozole)	Letrozole caused amenorrhea, but endometriotic lesions were preserved, suggesting treatment for uterine endometriosis is different from that for the ovaries (22, 23).
Endometriosis affected by other hormones used in combination with aromatase-inhibitors	Flutamide treatment and goserelin treatment significantly reduced endometriotic implants, but did not reduce pain (24). Combination therapy with letrozole and medroxyprogesterone acetate reduced endometriotic implants (25).
