tragedy theatre practices and education in the United Kingdom This is situated within what the volume proposes as the Classics ecology The term ecology frequently used in Theatre Studies understands Classics as a field of cultural production dependent on shared knowledge circulated via formal and informal networks which operate on the basis of mutually beneficial exchange Productions of Greek tragedy may be influenced by members of the team studying Classics subjects at school or university or reading popular works of Classical scholarship or else by working with an academic consultant All of these have some degree of connection to academic Classics albeit filtered through different lenses creating a network of mutual influence and benefit the ecology In this way theatrical productions of Greek drama may in the long term influence Classics as an academic discipline and certainly contribute to attesting to the relevance of Classics in the modern world The chapters in this volume include contributions by both theatre makers and academics whose backgrounds vary between Theatre Studies and Classics They comprise a variety of case studies and approaches exploring the dissemination of knowledge about the ancient world through projects that engage with Greek tragedy theories and practices of theatre making through the chorus and practical relationships between scholars and theatre makers By understanding the staging of Greek tragedy in the United Kingdom today as being part of the Classics ecology the book examines practices and processes as key areas in which the value of engaging with the ancient past is re negotiated This book is primarily suitable for students and scholars working in Classical Reception and Theatre Studies who are interested in the reception history of Greek tragedy and the intersection of the two fields It is also of use to more general Classics and Theatre Studies audiences especially those engaged with current debates around saving Classics and those interested in a structural systemic approach to the intersection between theatre culture and class
