Assignment 10 - Cell Communication and Signaling: Cytosol

1. What is a signal transduction pathway? Give an example.

A signal transduction pathway is a series of events that starts with a signal (like a hormone) and ends with a response (like a change in gene expression).

Example: A signal transduction pathway that starts with a signal (like a hormone) and ends with a response (like a change in gene expression). The signal (hormone) binds to a receptor on the cell membrane, which activates a series of proteins (kinases) that eventually lead to the activation of a transcription factor. The transcription factor then enters the nucleus and binds to DNA, initiating the transcription of a gene into mRNA. The mRNA is then translated into a protein, which can then exert a cellular response.

2. What three general functions are an example of a signal transduction pathway?

Three general functions are an example of a signal transduction pathway: 1) Regulation of gene expression, 2) Regulation of cell growth and division, and 3) Regulation of cell death. These functions are controlled by the activation of a transcription factor, which then enters the nucleus and binds to DNA, initiating the transcription of a gene into mRNA. The mRNA is then translated into a protein, which can then exert a cellular response.
