Missmer,Jayashri Kulkarni,Vassiliki Benetou,Marianne Vidler,Chelsea Morroni,2023-02-07 As a result of the Coronavirus disease COVID 19 pandemic the world is facing one of the greatest challenges we have experienced in over a century The economic consequences for society at large are potentially catastrophic The health and social care sectors have reacted by providing emergency care on an unprecedented scale while the scientific community has focused on developing new treatments and a vaccine to prevent future waves of the pandemic Evidence is emerging to suggest that certain conditions such as obesity and hypertension predispose some individuals to a worse outcome if they become infected and that women may be less likely to die from COVID 19 than men It is also currently believed that pregnant women are at no greater risk than the general population There is an urgent need to determine whether these early observations are correct Furthermore we need to be sure that pregnancy outcomes are not affected by COVID 19 and that SARS CoV 2 is not transmitted to the fetus during pregnancy or labour nor to the infant through breast milk There are so many questions that need to be answered to optimise care avoid harm reduce anxiety amongst women and their families and inform health professionals and policymakers We also need to understand the unintended consequences of the global lockdown on women s health in general For example have rates of domestic violence risen to what extent has women s mental health been affected and have women successfully adapted or devised new coping mechanisms have women been denied access to gynaecological treatments during the lockdown including safe abortion and if so with what impact on their health and wellbeing has the female work force suffered disproportionately in economic terms have national and international recommendations and policies been sufficiently gender neutral have breastfeeding rates been adversely affected will COVID 19 make attainment of the UN SDGs more difficult etc In keeping with the Scope Mission of Frontiers in Global Women s Health this Research Topic aims to provide a multi disciplinary platform to answer important COVID 19 related questions that specifically impact upon women s health and wellbeing particular in resource poor settings The Topic Editors welcome a broad range of contributions including Original Research Reviews Commentaries Study Protocols and Systematic Reviews We would like to acknowledge Dr Nathalie MacDermott and Dr Rhiannon George Carey who have have acted as coordinators and have contributed to the preparation of

Crime Reduction Policies Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Justice Committee,2014-01-22 This report spells

out concerns raised about gaps in information and in implementation plans for the Government's proposed reform of probation services. The Transforming Rehabilitation proposals which would see probation services opened up to private and third sector providers and the introduction of payment incentives for reducing reoffending will radically change the probation system. The programme's aim to use expected savings from the delivery of existing probation services to provide post release supervision to short sentenced prisoners was generally welcomed. Up until now the most prolific offenders who receive repeated short sentences have received no statutory support. Nevertheless any gains made in reducing reoffending must not come at the expense of the supervision of offenders on other sentences and must not diminish the value of community sentences. Witnesses to the inquiry had major concerns about the scale, architecture, detail and consequences of the reforms much of which has not been tested and the pace at which the Government is seeking to implement them. They identified a particular risk in the Government's decision to split the delivery of probation services between a public National Probation Service dealing with the highest risk offenders and the new providers who will be dealing with low and medium risk offenders. At this stage with the plans already beginning to come into effect it is for the Government to look carefully at the areas where either risk or a need for clarification has been identified.
