Wolters Kluwer is a trademark of Wolters Kluwer N.V., Alphen aan den Rijn, the Netherlands.

Learning to write to others so they can understand is much easier if you follow certain rules.

If you write your name, you begin it with an uppercase letter. The rest of the letters in your name are probably lowercase letters.

RE: If your name is Berlin, you probably don't write music or novels.

EX: If your name is Ethan, you probably don't call yourself Ethan.

Yann-Gaël Guénard

Look at the first letter. What is it? Write down the upper-case and lower-case letters A and a.

Now look at the pictures under A. Where are they? Repeat the name of the pictures after me slowly. Each one starts with a different sound.

Now try labelling things in your room or house. Pick some things you want to name, like where your dinosaur collection goes or where you keep your dress-up clothes. Then write out your own labels. Stick out the words like you think they should sound.

Label the first letter of the words with uppercase letters because there are titles.

ECN: You might label one part of your room as Kylie's Dimensions or Caleb's Contours.
