StudySync Quick Guide

Objectives

- Reading Time: 10-12 minutes
- Purpose: Students will analyze a map. Students will determine where to make a reference line to use for research. Students practice understanding time zones and generalize a study outcome that encompasses them.
- How To Teach It: Students work in pairs or in groups of three. Students travel the map and find where latitude goes. Allow students to follow the logic in small groups and find their conclusions across the block (approximately 1-2 complete rotations).
- Learning Outcome: Students will use a map of Japan to determine where to place a reference line to complete the task.

Page Results

- Reading Time: 10-12 minutes
- Purpose: Students will find a world map, and determine where to make a reference line before keeping in mind where time zones are located, etc., etc. One of the concepts students will learn is that of the longitude system where 180 degrees is enough to determine where one time zone ends and another begins.
- How To Teach It: Before beginning the independence phase of the task, place in a small group, students focus on the one specific longitude section of the world (Europe) and try to take through the task. Working together may help students understand one in the group work independently, since each student's answer will help each group member find the answers to the rest of the task. When one student is not in their group, answer and ask multiple choice questions (one correct response) if necessary (single and short answer questions). If no answer is right, ask, "What's another word?" and multiple choice questions to those. If one student is confused or needs more questions, be prepared to do so. As the beginning of these pages, I would have students read each page and practice one question of using the longitude system. Students will then have something to reference when for those other word usage questions. Finally focus on the longitude section that one student has trouble with.
- Learning Outcome: Students will use a map of Japan, where the world is divided into time zones, either the correct conclusion of your students' findings, and where time is in the world, and a reference line.

Skills

- Reading Time: 10-12 minutes
- Purpose: Students will determine where to make a reference line. Students will use reading skills and will fully understand where time zones are located, and can be applied to groups working toward the outcome.
- How To Teach It: This will be completed in a small, rotated block (one student and two students) new group. An opportunity to practice is available for students to practice in the "How To Teach It" section. It generally will give students 1-2 minutes to discuss their questions, write it, and allow them to correct their own mistakes.
- Learning Outcome: Students will use a map of Japan, where the world is divided into time zones, either the correct conclusion of your students' findings, and where time is in the world, and a reference line.
