6.6.a.—Energy: It's Not All the Same to You!

In this unit, students learn about the eight energy resources, each with its own pros and benefits. This unit emphasizes students' writing about the pros and cons of these selected energy sources. They learn that conservation is a necessary step in the energy we produce. In conducting a cost/benefit analysis, students learn to consider not only the products involved in extracting, tapping, and harnessing the natural energy resources, but also the byproducts associated in the commercial processes necessary to produce useful energy—electricity—from these natural energy resources.
