Dependency and Development in Latin America Fernando Henrique Cardoso, Enzo Faletto, 2024-03-29 At the end of World War II several Latin American countries seemed to be ready for industrialization and self sustaining economic growth Instead they found that they had exchanged old forms of political and economic dependence for a new kind of dependency on the international capitalism of multinational corporations In the much acclaimed original Spanish edition Dependencia y Desarrollo en Am rica Latina and now in the expanded and revised English version Cardoso and Faletto offer a sophisticated analysis of the economic development of Latin America The economic dependency of Latin America stems not merely from the domination of the world market over internal national and enclave economies but also from the much more complex interaction of economic drives political structures social movements and historically conditioned alliances While heeding the unique histories of individual nations the authors discern four general stages in Latin America s economic development the early outward expansion of newly independent nations the political emergence of the middle sector the formation of internal markets in response to population growth and the new dependence on international markets In a postscript for this edition Cardoso and Faletto examine the political social and economic changes of the past ten years in light of their original hypotheses At the end of World War II several Latin American countries seemed to be ready for industrialization and self sustaining economic growth Instead they found that they had exchanged old forms of political and economic dependence for a new kind of dependence

Dependent Development Peter B. Evans, 2018-06-05 In order to analyze Brazil's recent accumulation of capital in the light of its continued dependence Peter Evans focuses on the relationships among multinational corporations local private entrepreneurs and state owned enterprises that have developed in Brazil over the last decade He argues that while relations among the three kinds of capital continue to be contradictory a triple alliance has been formed that provides the social structural basis for the pattern of local industrialization that has emerged The author begins with a review of the theories of imperialism and dependency in the third world Placing the Brazilian experience of the last twenty years in its historical context he traces the country's evolution from the period of classic dependence at the turn of the century to the current stage of dependent development In conclusion Professor Evans discusses the implications of the Brazilian model for other third world countries Examining the nature of the triple alliance as it is manifested in such industries as pharmaceuticals textiles and petrochemicals the author reveals the complex differentiation of the groups' roles in industrialization and lays bare the grounds for their collaboration and their conflict He consequently shows how the differing interests power and capabilities of the three groups have combined to produce a system promoting industrialization that benefits the elite partnership but excludes the larger population from the rewards of growth      Clientelism, Dependency and Development Julio A.
