Fundamentals of Geriatric Medicine Rainier P. Soriano, 2007-05-26

Prior to the evolution of modern medicine with its superabundance of diagnostic and therapeutic medical technology and the rise of the litigious society the value of clinical skills was evident in both history taking and the physical examination. Even today physicians can make a correct diagnosis solely by utilizing their clinical skills in about 90% of patient encounters. Furthermore in the past physicians understood their role as a psychologist and were more apt to be familiar with the social context of their patients. House calls were common. The doctor was also a placebo who at his best inspired hope and probably sped recovery. Geriatricians use both clinical skills and take advantage of modern technology sparingly for they know they are dealing with the most challenging and frail of patients older patients who so often present with multiple complex interacting behavioral social and physical problems. In contrast to medicine for young people working with the older patient is much more demanding. Furthermore the complex issue of societal attitudes toward old people can come into play specifically the physician's need to deal with natural fears of aging dependency depression dementia and death. Ageism is the enemy of effective medical treatment. At its best geriatrics exemplifies ways that medical care for all ages can become more humane problem oriented and holistic.

Geriatric Emergencies Lee A. Lindquist, Scott M. Dresden, 2019-05-15 Care for older adults in Emergency Departments EDs has historically been focused on acute medical conditions with little emphasis on geriatric specific issues. In 2010 emergency departments EDs throughout the nation saw almost 130 million patients, 15% of whom were 65 or older. The number of older adults who visit an ED has doubled in the last decade and continues to grow rapidly. Older adults receiving care in an ED are highly likely to be admitted to the hospital much more so than their younger counterparts. Preventing a hospital admission saves older adults from frequently encountered adverse events including hospital acquired delirium, functional status impairment, cognitive loss, and nursing home admission. It is unknown how many older adults are hospitalized for reasons other than acute medical illness such as functional decline, polypharmacy, progressive dementia, caregiver stress, or unstable living situation. These non-emergent conditions are rarely addressed during a typical ED visit due to lack of resources, significant patient volumes, and the need for rapid turnover of care spaces. The predominant management strategy of emergency physicians to handle these important but not imminently life threatening geriatric issues is to recommend hospital admission. Northwestern has pioneered the Geriatric Emergency Department through the creation of the Geriatric Emergency Department Innovation model (GEDI) with goals to prevent admissions for older adults by assessing and meeting their geriatric specific non-acute care needs in the ED. The GEDI model at Northwestern centers on a multi-disciplinary curriculum composed of clinical didactic and practical arms developed by emergency medicine and geriatrics educational experts. In this title we will present case studies of older adults seen in the Emergency Department through the GEDI model and discuss means of identifying screening for diagnosing and treating geriatric syndromes seen in the emergent care of the older adult patient. In addition there will be a set of concise take home points for each case study that will be easy to commit to memory and implement in clinical care of older adults. As the number of seniors seeking emergent care will continue to increase the ED setting must become responsive to geriatric specific needs. This book will provide a variety of models detailing how to offer comprehensive state of the art optimal care for managing the full range of geriatric syndromes that regularly present in the emergent care setting.

Practical Geriatric Assessment Howard Fillit, Gloria Picariello, 1998 Geriatric assessment is an integral part of geriatric care throughout the world. The frail elderly often have multiple chronic illnesses, functional disabilities, and psychosocial problems, their needs therefore extending far beyond the treatment of a single medical condition. Comprehensive assessment of such patients requires a multidisciplinary team approach and the use of an organized, efficient set of guidelines and procedures with which to identify and address potentially reversible problems. The ultimate goal is then to systematically restore and maintain the functions essential to preserve quality of life. Practical Geriatric Assessment is structured for ease of quick reference. The background to each application of geriatric assessment is given first and this is then placed in its practical context thus providing an essential guide to the principles and methods of effective geriatric assessment.
