Responsible decision-making also includes creating decisions that will positively influence the environment. In the following situations, what will you do?

You have a group project, and one of your group mates is not participating in your meetings. Today is your presentation to the class, and they suddenly show up. What will you do?

You and your friends were on the way to school when you saw a wallet on the street. Your friends told you to keep it. What will you do?

As the class president, you are to provide a theme for your class performance at the school festival. You asked for your classmates' opinions, but they had different ideas. What will you do?

It is your best friend's birthday, but your parents told you to take care of your brother because they need to go grocery shopping. What will you do?

Your math exam is on the same day and time as your basketball game. Your teammates are waiting for you because they rely on you for this match. What will you do?

You know who is responsible for spraying graffiti on the local community center. The police have asked for help. What will you do?

Decision Making Activities Middle School:

Decision-making Skills for Middle School Students Sherrel Bergmann, Gerald J. Rudman, 1985-01-01 Early adolescence is a time when students require adult assistance to become accurate and effective decision makers and problem solvers. Because of the fragmented nature of society the family structure and the schooling process schools need to establish a nonthreatening environment in which students can discuss the issues related to growing up. A decision making course in the middle school can become that program. Results of the first six years of the decision making course at Elm Place Middle School in Highland Park Illinois are described illustrating a definite positive response on the part of all students. The logistics for designing and implementing such a program in the middle school are discussed. Teaching strategies projects and activities are outlined. Sample activities are appended along with sample communications to parents and students. JD
