

Charley Harper

Renowned American artist Charley Harper (1923-2007) developed his deep affinity for the natural world early in life. Growing up in rural West Virginia, he spent many hours exploring the rural hills—often bare-handed—and stripping his shapes whatever caught his fancy. After studying at the Art Academy of Cincinnati and the Art Students League of New York City, he gained acclaim as a commercial illustrator for numerous publishing clients, most notably the Golden Book of Biology and Animal Kingdom, children's books published in the 1950s. Harper's drawings and posters, including some that appear in this calendar, have been published by a variety of nature- and conservation-oriented organizations.

Describing his elegant, minimalist method of depicting wildlife, Harper once said, "The exciting shapes, color combinations, patterns, textures, recognizable behavior and small yet powerful forces making interesting pictures. I regard the pictures as an ecosystem in which all the elements are interrelated, interdependent, perfectly balanced."
