manifest in the stringency of her standards in the skill she has in accessing and evaluating evidence and in the wisdom she displays in choosing contextually appropriate standards To be epistemically rational means in this view that one has discharged one's epistemic duties by using the contextually proper standards for finding and evaluating the available evidence during the process of belief formation In the course of defending this view Griesmaier discusses a wide variety of topics from the perspective of a unifying framework These topics include the possibility of lucky justification the importance of error avoidance the problem of simplicity various forms of evidentialism doxastic voluntarism epistemic deontologism the question of belief's aim contextualism and the connections between his account and formal models of justification and knowledge such as epistemic and justification logics
