It is based on the assumption that the meaning of a cultural product is not determined by the culture in which it originates, but by the culture in which it is received. This is a very important concept in the study of culture, as it allows us to understand how different cultures can interpret the same cultural products in different ways. This concept is also important in the study of the relationship between culture and society, as it helps us to understand how different cultures can interpret the same social reality in different ways.
