- How to distinguish between a primary and a secondary market:
 - primary: issuance, trading, selling, etc. (new money, something that is not already issued)
 - secondary: reselling, buying, etc. (already issued)
 - bond market: secondary market is much bigger than primary market (see diagram)
 - usually government and public
 - usually more liquid than stock market (more of them, more of value)
 - there are many more types of bonds than stocks and therefore it can be traded more easily
- How to distinguish between a direct and an indirect market:
 - direct: the issuer is the issuer (e.g. government if the issuer is the official "writing" the bond, central bank, company, bank, government, etc.)
 - indirect: intermediaries (e.g. bank) are in the middle (e.g. bank issues bonds on the bank's own account)
