ALPHABET

Learning the alphabet is more than just singing the ABC song, although that can often be a great start. The best way to support alphabet learning at home is to read books with your child. Reading helps children learn the importance of letters and to see them in print. Point out letters in their name as you read the story or ask them to find their favorite letters.

If your child is just beginning to learn their letters, start first with the letters in their name. Many studies suggest also learning lowercase letters first as print contains more lowercase letters than uppercase ones. It is also recommended to learn letter sounds before letter names to help associate with learning to read and blending sounds into words more successfully.

Purchase some magnetic or foam alphabet letters and play quick games throughout the day with your child such as pointing out and naming letters. Talk about the initial letter sounds of their favorite items. "Let's play with your truck. Truck starts with a t (or /t/ sound). Ask your child's teacher for a copy of the alphabet chart used in class or find one free online. Use the chart to point to the letters when listening to a letter sounds song.
