Chinas Pension System A Vision Directions In Development:

China's Pension System Mark C. Dorfman, Robert Holzmann, Philip O'Keefe, 2013-04 Comprehensive reform of China's pension and social security system is an essential element of achieving its objectives of a harmonious society and sustainable development. Over the past few years the Government has considered various options and initiated several significant measures. In 2009 the authorities established a national framework for rural pensions the Rural Pension Pilot Program RPPP and in 2011 a Pilot Social Pension Insurance for Urban Residents announced. In this process it has articulated principles for a reformed urban pension system indicated by 12 Chinese characters which are broad coverage protects at the basic level is multi layered and sustainable while the principles for the rural system indicated by 12 characters are broad coverage protects at the basic level flexible and sustainable. These principles underpin the commitments made at the 17th Party Congress towards a comprehensive and integrated social security system by 2020. Although substantial reforms of the pension system have been undertaken over the past two decades some policymakers have suggested that additional reforms are needed to meet the needs of China's rapidly changing economy and society. Issues such as legacy costs system fragmentation and limited coverage have not been fully addressed. At the same time many new challenges have emerged such as rapid urbanization increased income inequality and urban rural disparities greater informalization of the labor force changes in family structure and the effects of increased globalization. This report has been prepared at the request of the Ministry of Finance to develop a medium term vision of a holistic framework that could be realized by 2040 for strengthening old age income protection in China which is consistent with the principles outlined in the 12 characters and design options towards achieving it. The main body of this report outlines this vision summarizing the key features of a proposed medium term pension system while the annexes provide the deeper analysis and context which underpins the recommendations contained herein.

Urban China The World Bank; Development Research Center of the State Council, 2014-07-29 In the last 30 years China's record economic growth lifted half a billion people out of poverty with rapid urbanization providing abundant labor, cheap land and good infrastructure. While China has avoided some of the common ills of urbanization, strains are showing as inefficient land development leads to urban sprawl and ghost towns, pollution threatens people's health and farmland and water resources are becoming scarce. With China's urban population projected to rise to about one billion or close to 70 percent of the country's population by 2030, China's leaders are seeking a more coordinated urbanization process. Urban China is a joint research report by a team from the World Bank and the Development Research Center of China's State Council, which was established to address the challenges and opportunities of urbanization in China and to help China forge a new model of urbanization. The report takes as its point of departure the conviction that China's urbanization can become more efficient, inclusive and sustainable. However, it stresses that achieving this vision will require strong support from both government and the markets for policy reforms in a number of areas. The report proposes six main areas for reform: first, amending land management institutions to foster more efficient land use; denser cities; modernized agriculture and more equitable wealth distribution; second, adjusting the hukou household registration system to increase labor mobility and provide urban migrant workers equal access to a common standard of public services; third, placing urban finances on a more sustainable footing while fostering financial discipline among local governments; fourth, improving urban planning to enhance connectivity and encourage scale and agglomeration economies; fifth, reducing environmental pressures through more efficient resource management; and sixth, improving governance at the local level.

Economics and Ageing José Luis Iparraguirre, 2018-12-11 This upper level textbook provides a coherent introduction to the economic implications of individual and population ageing. Placing economic considerations into a wider social sciences context, this is ideal reading not only for advanced undergraduate and masters students in economics, health economics and the economics of ageing, but also policy makers, students, professionals and practitioners in gerontology, sociology, health related sciences and social care. This volume introduces the different conceptualisations of age and definitions of old age, as well as the main theories of individual ageing as developed in the disciplines of biology, psychology and sociology. It covers the economic theories of fertility, mortality and migration and describes the four main frameworks that can be used to study economics and ageing: namely the life cycle, the overlapping generations, the perpetual youth and the dynastic models.

Aging in East and West Vern L. Bengtson, 2000-09-20 Widely recognized experts present the first comparative analysis of recent developments among six Eastern and Western nations concerning population aging and its consequences. Chapters focus on demographic trends, sociocultural contexts and policy implications. Nations selected as case studies include the People's Republic of China the Republic of Korea Japan Germany the United Kingdom and the United States The editors and contributors call attention to the varied trajectories and effects of population aging in culturally diverse societies that are often at different stages or on different paths of economic development Such analyses bring into sharper focus those conditions that are unique or similar and emphasize the ways in which cultural stereotypes of aging and the elderly complicate our understanding of the effects of world wide population aging
