

Instead of the six levels of Bloom's Taxonomy, Costa's House breaks it down into just 3 levels, which is easier for students

LEVEL THREE

- Imagine...
- Predict the outcome is...
- How would you grade or evaluate...?

LEVEL TWO

- How would you change...?
- How would you illustrate...?
- How would you demonstrate...?
- How would you compare and contrast...?

it up.

LEVEL ONE

- How would you define/ describe...?
- Can you list...?
- How would you explain...?
- Can you name...?
- Can you identify...?
- How would you evaluate...?
- Can you give examples...?
- How would you relate...?
- How would you connect...?
- Can you restate...?

NOTE TO TEACHERS

Critical thinking is invaluable in the classroom. Students need to be comfortable in thinking critically naturally and easily. Costa's House of Questions is a different way of organizing higher thinking questions or Bloom's questions.

I went to a training on it and really liked the 'why' it organized the different levels, making it much easier for students to understand. Instead of 6 levels, there are only 3 basic levels. Level one is the lowest, level two is the middle, and level three is the highest. We should strive for most of our questions to come from levels two and three.

You can use the critical thinking stems in several different ways:

- You can create a bulletin board, so students can reference it whenever they need.
- You can print the posters for your classroom or groups.
- You can print the cards, laminate them, and have students choose one from out of that.
- You can print out the student page with all three levels on it and have students glue it in their notebooks or laminate them.

Costas Question Stems:

Self-Determination and Collective Responsibility in the Secessionist Struggle Costas Laoutides,2016-03-03 The often violent emergence of new independent states following the end of the Cold War generated discussion about the normative grounds of territorial separatism A number of opposing approaches surfaced debating whether and under which circumstances there is a right for a community to secede from its host country Overwhelmingly these studies placed emphasis on the right to secession and neglected the moral stance of secessionist movements as agents in international relations In this book Costas Laoutides explores the collective moral agency involved in secessionist struggles offering a theoretical model for the collective responsibility of secessionist groups Case studies on the Kurds and the people of Moldova Transdnistria illustrate the author s theoretical arguments as he seeks to establish how although the principle of self determination was envisaged as a means of gradually bestowing political power upon the people it never managed to realize its full potential because it was interpreted strictly within a framework of exclusionary politics of identity Politics, Postmodernity, and Critical Legal Studies refinement of the customer experience which has further implications for how work is organized and enacted At the same time employees have sought changes in their work arrangements in order to help them achieve a more satisfactory relationship between their work and non work lives Many have also taken increased responsibility for managing their own work opportunities moving away from dependency on a single employer The implications of these significant and widespread changes are the central focus of this book and in particular the implications for workers managers and organizations It
