Commodity Prices and Markets Takatoshi Ito, Andrew K. Rose, 2011-02-15 Fluctuations of commodity prices most notably of oil capture considerable attention and have been tied to important economic effects such as inflation and low rates of economic growth Commodity Prices and Markets advances our understanding of the consequences of these fluctuations providing both general analysis and a particular focus on the countries of the Pacific Rim The volume addresses three distinct subjects the difficulties in forecasting commodity prices the effects of exogenous commodity price shocks on the domestic economy and the relationship between price shocks and monetary policy The ability to forecast commodity prices is difficult but of great importance to businesses and governments and this volume will be invaluable to professionals and policy makers interested in the field

Three Attempts at Inflation Forecasting in Pakistan Madhavi Bokil, 2005 This paper presents three empirical approaches to forecasting inflation in Pakistan The preferred approach is a leading indicators model in which broad money growth and private sector credit growth help forecast inflation A univariate approach also yields reasonable forecasts but seems less suited to capturing turning points A vector autoregressive VAR model illustrates how monetary developments can be described by a Phillips curve type relationship We deal with potential parameter instability on account of fundamental changes in Pakistan's economic system by restricting our sample to more recent observations Gregorian and Islamic calendar seasonality are addressed by using 12 month moving averages

State Per-Capita Income Change Since 1950 Leonard F. Wheat, William H. Crown, 1995-11-20 This book refutes prevailing theories that attribute post 1950 state per capita income convergence to 1 neo classical adjustment mechanisms 2 institutional sclerosis and 3 southern industrialization Wheat and Crown argue that southern income was low because of slavery's legacy sharecropping agricultural dependence low urbanization poor education high Black population percentages and low wage rates The legacy's dominant feature was the sharecropper tenant farmer system which replaced slavery Sharecropping was the foundation of southern poverty Sharecropping's collapse beginning around 1950 affected all of the other features of slavery's legacy For example millions of sharecroppers out migrated from the South shifting poverty to the North and lowering the South's Black percentage This out migration white in migration and the civil rights movement jointly raised educational attainment in the South further boosting southern income Southern industrialization had only a marginally significant effect In 1950's high income region the West the transport cost element in the price of manufactured goods shrank because of 1 transportation improvements and 2 rapid manufacturing growth which reduced the need for long distance imports from the Manufacturing Belt The resulting decline in the West's relative cost of living led to wage adjustments Consequently the West despite having the highest manufacturing growth rates had the nation's lowest per capita income growth rates Agricultural decline and educational gains stimulated income growth in the Plains Nationally per capita employment gains were a strong influence Organiser ,1998
