

Sentence Skills Review

The CPT sentence skills test measures students' editing skills. The minimum required score for this exam is 86%.

This booklet gives students the opportunity to review some basic grammar rules and provides some practice for the CPT test. It does not include every rule found on the CPT exam. Some other helpful tools that will allow you to practice editing sentences are GED and SAT books.

Subject/Verb Agreement

Singular subjects need singular verbs, and plural subjects need plural verbs because both must agree in number. Singular verbs in the present tense end in "s" or "es." Usually in English the subject comes first and then the verb, but in many direct questions and when "here" or "there" begins the sentence, the verb comes first in the sentence. Prepositional phrases that follow the subject can be troublesome for students. Nothing in the prepositional phrase can be the subject of the sentence. Always eliminate prepositional phrases first, and then find the subject and verb.

Examples:

Everyone in our company (plans, plan) to go to the company picnic on Saturday.
Delete the prepositional phrase "in our company." Find the subject "Everyone," which is singular. Choose the singular verb "plans" to agree with the singular subject.

Here (is, are) the announcers for the local charity benefit taking place today.
("Announcers" is the subject; choose the plural verb "are" to agree in number with the plural subject "announcers." "Here" is never a subject.

Modifiers

Dangling modifiers do not have anything to describe—they just dangle in sentences. If a modifier has nothing to modify (a dangling modifier), add or change words so that it has something to modify. If a modifier is in the wrong place (a misplaced modifier), put it as close as possible to the word, phrase, or clause it modifies.

Examples:

(1) Hanging from the ledge high over a mountain, Danielle saw the trees with their brightly colored fall leaves.

Rewritten:

Danielle saw the trees with their brightly colored fall leaves hanging from the ledge high over a mountain.

(2) Studying for a test, the baby finally went to sleep.
