

CPI Super Linear HPAs

The Latest Advancement in HPA Efficiency

Super Linear is a technique used to maximize usable linear power while minimizing size, weight, and power consumption.

Most traditional HPAs are designed to run from small signal to saturated power. In practice however, the true usable power in a typical uplink application is limited by linearity requirements set by Intelsat and other satellite organizations. Thus, while power back off of 3 to 7 dB is all that is ever required, one still needs the top end peak power to avoid clipping of the transmitted signal. This clipping results in Intermodulation products, spectral regrowth, and other non-linearities. Operating power must be limited to a maximum -3 dB from the maximum peak power for low bit-error rates when transmitting QPSK, QAM, CDMA, and OFDM signals.

The TWT and high power amplifier (HPA) can be optimized to work best at the 3 dB backoff point (half average power). This results in a more efficient tube at the true operating point. Internal TWT and amplifier temperatures are reduced, required amplifier prime power is minimized, and HPA size and weight are dramatically reduced.

A comparison of the specifications of CPI's Super Linear 2250 W HPA against those of traditional TWTAs and SSPAs shows a 30% reduction in size, a 20% reduction in weight, and a 25-70% reduction in prime power, with no degradation in the linear performance at backoff. This is a rare case of "win-win-win," with no penalty for the extra performance. Predistortion linearizers are highly effective with the Super Linear HPA, and as with traditional HPAs are recommended for maximum carrier traffic.

Internal alarm and fault levels are set in the HPA to automatically avoid excessive body current if driven past 3 dB backoff. The intermod and spectral regrowth specifications are the same as they are rated for a traditional, full-CW HPA, typically -24 dBc intermods or 6 dBc spectral regrowth. Super Linear TWTAs are now available in C- and Ka-band.
