new evidence on water quality. Current water monitoring programs, however, do not measure bacteria. Bacteria are often used as an indicator of water quality because they are present in all natural waters. However, they are not always present in large enough numbers to be detected by standard monitoring methods.

Another type of immunotherapy that targets a tumor-associated antigen is called adoptive T-cell therapy. This therapy involves isolating T cells from a patient, growing them in the laboratory, and then returning them to the patient. These T cells are then programmed to recognize and kill cancer cells.
