Culture Fair Intelligence Tests R. B. Cattell, A. K. S. Cattell, 1973 Intelligence Scholastic Aptitude      The 16PF Fifth Edition Technical Manual Steven R. Conn, Mark L. Rieke, 1994      Multilingualism and Creativity Anatoliy V. Kharkhurin, 2012-09-03 In this monograph Anatoliy V Kharkhurin presents the results of his empirical investigation into the impact of multilingual practice on an individual's creative potential. Until now the relationship between these two activities has received little attention in the academic community. The book makes an attempt to resuscitate this theme and provides a solid theoretical framework supported by contemporary empirical research conducted in a variety of geographic, linguistic, and sociocultural locations. This study demonstrates that several factors such as the multilinguals' age of language acquisition, proficiency in these languages, and experience with cultural settings in which these languages were acquired have a positive impact on selective attention and language-mediated concept activation mechanisms. Together, these facilitate generative and innovative capacities of creative thinking. This book will be of great interest not only to scholars in the fields of multilingualism and creativity but also to educators and all those interested in enhancing foreign language learning and fostering creativity.

Beers, 2013-06-29 In this volume of the series Human Brain Function: Assessment and Rehabilitation we cover the area of how brain function is assessed with behavioral or neuropsychological instruments. These assessments are typically conducted by clinical neuropsychologists or behavioral neurologists, and so we made an effort to present the somewhat differing approaches to these two related disciplines. Clinical neuropsychologists are psychologists who typically utilize standardized tests, while behavioral neurologists are physicians who generally assess brain function as part of the clinical neurological evaluation. Both approaches have much to offer. The basic assumption of neuropsychological assessment is that the brain is the organ of behavior, and therefore the condition of the brain may be evaluated with behavioral measures. Neuropsychological tests are those measures found by research to be particularly sensitive to alterations in brain function. An adequate neuropsychological test is a procedure that can be related to some objective measure of alteration in brain function. Over the years, these objective measures have changed but generally involve documentation through direct observation of brain tissue or through histological, pathological, neuroimaging, or other laboratory procedures. The methods described in the first two volumes of this series describe the neuroimaging procedures that are often used in the validation of neuropsychological tests.

Educational and Psychological Assessment of Exceptional Children H. Lee Swanson, Billy L. Watson, 1989

Intellectually Gifted Learning Disabled Students Susan J. Hansford, 1987. The Intellectually Gifted Learning Disabled Project investigated characteristics of this population and implications for educational programming. Twenty-three children aged 7 to 16 years old were identified through a referral process involving schools and parents. Only two subjects were female. A detailed analysis of school records, individual assessments of cognitive, affective, and language abilities, and parent interviews were utilized. An instructional component was designed to provide an appropriate and motivating educational program focusing on computer education, affective development, and a study of the brain, learning, and behavior. Among the conclusions of the project were the following: that most schools identified students who were underachieving gifted children rather than learning disabled students who would be expected to exhibit verbal performance scale discrepancies and large amounts of subtest scatter; that successful learning disabled gifted individuals overcome their deficits by compensating with strengths; and that learning disabled gifted children may alter the processing of information by developing strategies using preferred performance modes. Among eight recommendations were the following: evaluate strengths and weaknesses in information processing; assist the development of metacognitive strategies; teach students to compensate for weaknesses by using strengths; develop higher order problem solving and information processing skills. The first edition in this series brings together reviews of over one hundred tests most frequently used by school psychologists.
