

“THE END WITH THE BEGINNING” BY JONATHAN LEE

INTRODUCTION

“The End with the Beginning” is a poem by Jonathan Lee, first published in 2008. The poem is a response to the 2008 financial crisis, which Lee describes as “the greatest economic catastrophe since the Great Depression.” The poem explores the interconnectedness of the financial system and the environment, and the ways in which the collapse of one system can lead to the collapse of another. The poem also reflects on the concept of “beginning” and “end,” and the ways in which these concepts are often used to describe the financial crisis. The poem ends with a call for a new beginning, a “new world” that is “more just, more sustainable, and more beautiful.”

The poem is a complex and layered work, with many different levels of meaning. It is a call for a new world, a world that is “more just, more sustainable, and more beautiful.” It is a call for a new beginning, a world that is “more just, more sustainable, and more beautiful.” It is a call for a new beginning, a world that is “more just, more sustainable, and more beautiful.”
