Careers In Interior Design:

Becoming an Interior Designer Christine M. Piotrowski, 2008-12-22 Becoming an INTERIOR DESIGNER Here is the completely updated guide to today's interior design careers a clear and concise survey of the interior design field covering History of the profession Educational preparation Interviews with designers Certification and licensing The design process Where the jobs are Owning your own firm Design specialties Residential Commercial Sustainable design Corporate Hospitality Retail Healthcare Institutional Entertainment Restoration and adaptive use Becoming an Interior Designer is the go to book for an inside look at the profession of interior design today The advice from a broad range of practitioners and educators about the professional requirements and business of interior design make it an invaluable tool for those contemplating an interior design career The added bonus is Christine's ability to draw out from her interviewees the common passion for improving quality of life which is a rarely referenced quality of a successful interior designer Suzan Globus FASID LEED AP 2007 ASID National President Careers in Interior Design, 2020-04-24 CHOOSING A CAREER SHOULD BE AN EXCITING PROCESS of self discovery Taking a look at the things you like to do is a great way to learn a little more about yourself What are you really good at Answer that question and you may be on the way to the perfect career First of all take a look around Not hypothetically Take a look at the space around you The room you are sitting in The hallways lobbies and other public spaces around it Are these spaces pleasing Do the colors work together Is there harmony among the furniture window treatments and architectural style Do the various elements of the room inspire you to do something like study work chat with friends or eat The human environment around you known as the built environment did not happen by accident It was painstakingly planned by interior designers and you can be one of them Most people think that all interior designers do is select paint colors and swatches of fabric that go together Choosing pleasing color palettes is certainly one of the things that interior designers do but that is only the beginning Individuals and businesses hire interior designers to make sure that interior spaces not only look good but most importantly encourage certain types of behavior Classrooms are designed to encourage study Stores are designed to encourage spending Restaurants are designed to encourage quiet conversation Human psychology is inherent in interior design and it goes far beyond pairing fabrics and paints In fact the profession makes a distinction between interior designers and interior decorators who tend to concentrate on adornments like color and fabrics rather than designing complete spaces Today's interior designers work closely with architects and engineers to make sure that interiors are taken into consideration during the critical architectural design process They read blueprints and give architects valuable input about the placement of important features like escalators and the design of emotion inducing spaces like lobbies Sure the upholstery has to go with the paint but if a room's fundamental design is all wrong the color palette is not going to matter very much The information in this report is designed to give you an overview of career opportunities in the world of interior design There are sections on how to break into the business what kind of education you will need how much money you can expect to earn at various stages in your career and even what you may like and dislike about a career in interior design If you like what you read here be sure to check out the links on the last page of this report There you will find even more information about career opportunities in this fascinating field
