Sustainable Concrete Solutions Costas Georgopoulos, Andrew Minson, 2014-03-17 The challenges facing humanity in the 21st century include climate change population growth overconsumption of resources overproduction of waste and increasing energy demands For construction practitioners responding to these challenges means creating a built environment that provides accommodation and infrastructure with better whole life performance using lower volumes of primary materials less non renewable energy wasting less and causing fewer disturbances to the natural environment Concrete is ubiquitous in the built environment It is therefore essential that it is used in the most sustainable way so practitioners must become aware of the range of sustainable concrete solutions available for construction While sustainable development has been embedded into engineering curricula it can be difficult for students and academics to be fully aware of the innovations in sustainable construction that are developed by the industry Sustainable Concrete Solutions serves as an introduction to and an overview of the latest developments in sustainable concrete construction It provides useful guidance with further references to students researchers academics and practitioners of all construction disciplines who are faced with the challenge of designing specifying and constructing with concrete

Low Impact Building Tom Woolley, 2013-01-22 This guide to the designs technologies and materials that really make green buildings work will help architects specifiers and clients make informed choices based on reliable technical information Low Impact Building Housing using Renewable Materials is about changing the way we build houses to reduce their carbon footprint and to minimise environmental damage One of the ways this can be done is by reducing the energy and environmental impact of the materials and resources used to construct buildings by choosing alternative products and systems. In particular we need to recognise the potential for using natural and renewable construction materials as a way to reduce both carbon emissions but also build in a more benign and healthy way. This book is an account of some attempts to introduce this into mainstream house construction and the problems and obstacles that need to be overcome to gain wider acceptance of genuinely environmental construction methods. The book explores the nature of renewable materials in depth where do they come from what are they made of and how do they get into the construction supply chain. The difference between artisan and self build materials like earth and straw and more highly processed and manufactured products such as wood fibre insulation boards is explored. The author then gives an account of the Renewable House Programme in the UK explaining how it came about and how it was funded and managed by Government agencies. He analyses 12 case studies of projects from the Programme setting out the design and methods of construction buildability environmental assessment tools used in the design performance in terms of energy air tightness carbon footprint and post occupancy issues. The policy context of energy and sustainability in the UK Europe and the rest of the world is subjected to a critical examination to show how this affects the use of natural and renewable materials in the market for insulation and other construction materials. The debate over energy usage and embodied energy is discussed as this is central to the reason why even many environmentally progressive people ignore the case for natural and renewable materials. The book offers a discussion of building physics and science considering energy performance moisture durability health and similar issues. A critical evaluation of assessment accreditation and labelling of materials and green buildings is central to this as well as a review of some of the key research in the field.
