TIPS FOR COMMUNICATING EFFECTIVELY

Communication is a core leadership function

1

Communicate relentlessly

Communicate information, thoughts and ideas clearly — and frequently — in different media.

2

Simplify

Say what you mean. Be direct. Simple communication can be smart communication.

3

Hold your thoughts

Encourage the other person to offer ideas and solutions before you give yours.

4

Use stories

When you tell a good story, you give life to a vision, goal, or objective.

5

Back it up

If people hear one thing from you and see another, your credibility is shot. People need to trust you.

Communicating Effectively Saundra Hybels,Richard L. Weaver (II),Richard L. Weaver,1986 Words Matter
Elizabeth Keating,Sirkka L. Jarvenpaa,2016-10-18 In a twenty first century global economy in which multinational companies coordinate and collaborate with partners and clientele around the world it is usually English that is the parlance of business research technology and finance Most assume that if parties on both ends of the conference call are fluent English speakers information will be shared seamlessly and without any misunderstanding. But is that really true? Words Matter examines how communications between transnational partners routinely break down even when all parties are fluent English speakers. The end result is lost time, lost money and often discord among those involved. What's going wrong? Contrary to a common assumption, language is never neutral. It's heavily influenced by one's culture and can often result in unintended meanings depending on word choice, a particular phrase or even one's inflection. A recent study of corporate managers found that one out of five projects fail primarily because of ineffective transnational communication, resulting in the loss of millions of dollars. In Words Matter, you will venture into the halls of multinational tech companies around the world to study language and culture at work, learn practical steps for harnessing research in communication and anthropology to become more skilled in the digital workplace and learn to use the Communication Plus Model, which can be easily applied in multiple situations leading to better communication and better business outcomes.

Communicating Effectively with Senior Executives

Sorin Dumitrescu, 2017-05-05

Communicating with a senior executive is probably not something you do every day and you're probably glad about that. Whether by phone, email or in person, communicating with a senior executive can be a daunting and stressful challenge. But it can also be an incredible opportunity to get your point across, influence decisions and establish yourself as someone with value to contribute. It's an opportunity you'll want to make the most of. Given what's at stake, it's critical that you prepare this communication properly and professionally. Doing this will not only impress the senior executive; it will maximize your chances of successfully achieving the goal of the communication. Proper preparation begins with considering the characteristics and drivers that influence a senior executive's decision making. You also need to be clear about the parameters of your communication: What is it you want to communicate? What are you trying to achieve? If your communication is going to succeed, you also need to follow certain other principles. For example, your message must be to the point and relevant. It must correspond to the executive's personality and decision making style. And you need to be on top of the financial and customer implications of what you're saying. This course will help you shape and clarify your communications with senior executives. It will outline the principles to follow and present some very important tips on building credibility with senior executives. These principles and tips are all crucial to ensure that you're taken seriously. Finally, this course will provide detailed guidance on how best to approach and plan your meetings with senior executives. Overall, the course will help you make your communications with senior executives more productive and beneficial to all concerned. Does the idea of communicating with senior executives in your company make your heart race, give you chills of terror or make your mind go completely blank? Communication isn't everybody's strength, but in business, having the skills to effectively communicate your ideas to senior executives will make you a better manager. You probably know there's a big difference between a meeting and chatting with a senior executive in the parking lot. Or between presenting a new idea to senior executives and reporting on how your project is progressing. You must be prepared to communicate with senior executives in both formal and informal settings You ll also explore different communication platforms like presentations e mail phone calls and elevator pitches and learn about the advantages and disadvantages of each Then you ll be able to use what you ve learned to choose the most appropriate platform to deliver your message You ll also learn how to adapt your approach for different purposes depending on what you re trying to achieve with your communication The purpose of your communication may be to report propose or make a request But whatever your purpose this course will teach you appropriate principles and guidelines to follow so you get your message across effectively
