DISSOCIATIVE DISORDERS (cont.)

Dissociative fugue: - Characterized by suddenly and inexplicably leaving home and taking on a completely new identity with no memory of a former life. While in this state, the person experiences amnesia, but can otherwise function normally.

Dissociative identity disorder (DID): - Characterized by the presence of two or more distinct personality systems in the same individual. Each personality has its own name, unique memories, behaviors, and self-image. Many researchers and most health professionals now question if this is a genuine psychological disorder. Skeptics believe that many of the reported cases are not supported by strong scientific evidence.

3.3. Hospitalis effect: - observed better patient outcomes and lower death rate different from other clinical care settings.

THE ROSENTHAL STUDY: THE INFLUENCE OF DIAGNOSTIC LABELS

- The Pseudo-psychiatrist experiment:
- In 1970, David Rosenhan and 7 mentally healthy volunteers presented themselves for admission to 12 psychiatric hospitals in 8 states. The pseudopatients claimed to have voices that said, "empty," "fuller," and "thud." Other than this, the pseudopatients acted normally and reported no other psychiatric problems.
- All of the psychiatric hospitals admitted the pseudopatients. Seven were diagnosed with schizophrenia, and one was diagnosed with manic-depressive psychosis.
- The hospitals kept the pseudopatients for stays ranging from 3 to 52 days, with an average of 19 days. All were released with a diagnosis of schizophrenia ("in remission.")
- It is interesting to note that while all of the mental health professionals failed to detect the issue, many of the patients correctly realized that the pseudopatients were pretending to be mentally ill.
