Operating on the principle that every child, when brought into the world, brings with him a natural desire to learn, the Montessori system of education attempts to provide the child with the maximum amount of freedom within the limits of order and discipline. The child is free to move about, touch, and explore his environment, but is also free to choose his own work, and to work at his own pace. The teacher, who is trained to observe the child's interests and to provide him with the materials he needs, is not a dictator, but a guide, who helps the child to develop his own potentialities and to become a self-reliant, self-disciplined, and self-motivated individual.

Components and Missing data Review

Proposed to present a framework for the design and management of the new environmental management framework, and to discuss the initial responses to the framework. This section will introduce the framework, the environmental management system, the environmental management system, and the environmental management system.
