Abstract

Dahl's sign, a clinical sign in which areas of thickened and darkened skin seen on the lower thighs and/or elbows, is seen in patients with severe chronic respiratory disorders such as chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), interstitial lung disease, congestive heart failure (CHF), and chronic moderate to severe persistent asthma. The aim of our present report is to create awareness and encourage providers to lay emphasis on physical examination in every medical examination that can give clues to the severity of the underlying disorder.

Keywords: dahl's sign, thinker's sign, copd, severe chronic respiratory disease

Introduction

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) is a global health problem that affects approximately 251 million people worldwide. Tobacco use is the most common cause of COPD. The diagnosis is primarily based on spirometry. Barrel chest, pursed-lip breathing, and clubbing are well-recognized findings among COPD patients. Dahl's sign or Thinker's sign, a clinical sign in which areas of thickened and darkened skin are seen on the lower thighs and/or elbows, was described as early as 1963 but is not commonly recognized among students and training physicians [1]. There is no documentation in the literature regarding the incidence of Dahl's sign in COPD. Creating awareness of this important physical exam finding will aid many physicians to diagnose severe COPD at the bedside.

Case Presentation

A 67-year-old African American male with a history of COPD on home oxygen 4 liters per minute, hypertension, hyperlipidemia, ongoing tobacco abuse one pack per day presents with cough, shortness of breath, and wheezing for three days. The cough was productive with yellowish, white sputum and increased volume. He had dyspnea at rest, which is worse with minimal exertion. He denies any orthopnea, paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnea, swelling of legs, and weight gain. He complains of chest pain with every coughing spell. Chest pain is located in the parasternal area, aggravated with cough or deep breaths, non-radiating, not associated with diaphoresis or palpitations. He denied any fevers, chills, or rigors and had no sick contacts. He tried albuterol nebulization at home with minimal improvement in dyspnea.

In the emergency room, he was found to be in moderate to severe respiratory distress, with a respiratory rate of 28 per minute, oxygen saturation of 77% on room air, tachycardia with a heart rate of 98, in labored breathing, using the accessory muscles of the neck, and in tripod
