

Across the Hood

Precautions: Wait for the hood to cool down if it has been a hot day, or if the engine has just been turned off (unless you are driving a rear-engined VW Type 4). Check ground clearance (at least 6 inches) in order to avoid damaging the suspension.

This is a spontaneous move for those who can't wait to get into the car, let alone get a room, or for those who don't actually have a car but love the smell of gasoline. Head for the parking lot and assess the potential. Most modern sedans have sloping hoods and are difficult either to lean against or sprawl across, so look for an SUV, an off-roader, or an old-school luxury sedan.

MAJOR HAZARD

As it may not be your car, you will not be able to check that the parking brake is on. Be aware that many car alarms are set off by external motion.

You need height and/or width. Tall cars like the Jeep Commander (71.9 inches) or the Land Rover LR3 (74.1 inches) are ideal, and very solid, as they are built to withstand a challenge—including a rhino charge. Use them to execute an athletic position like Driving the Peg Home (pictured), which is traditionally performed against a wall. The woman perches on the edge of the hood, facing the man, legs apart, feet resting on the fender. The man stands in front of her (he may have to bend his knees or stand on the fender, depending on his height). She then wraps her legs and arms around him to keep the couple in congress. Our cleric variation means that he does not have to support her weight, but he must hold her close to him in order to keep her from sliding backward as he thrusts.

If the hood is broad and flat, you could try the Top. The man lies flat across the hood (spreading his weight evenly) and the woman sits astride him, raises her legs clear of his body and swirls around. Any one of the big square-hooded vintage Volvo 200 series (nicknamed "the brick") would be ideal for this. Or, for a classic ride, try the Maserati Quattroporte Sport GT, or the iconic Jaguar E-type, a sure-to-impress 164 inches long, and most of that a one-piece hood. The E-type is only 48 inches high, and a ridge runs down the center of the hood, so this option is more about style than comfort.

Pre-date Checklist

- Men may need socks to protect rhino against fenders. Women should avoid heeled shoes, which could catch in the front grill.
- Go for a mud-spattered car if there is a choice; it may dirty your clothes but will provide more traction.
