- Showing Time 10-15 minutes.
- Purpose: Provides a visual summary of a topic. This process includes time to move information that can't be used for research. Students can demonstrate knowledge and practice a skills extension that corresponds to the topic.
- Show To Teach 5: Shows what you can do (experts comment) and the new and final new think group, other students to talk about the topic in small groups and then students answer the following question in 1-2 complete sentences.
- Showing Summary: gives students one or a list of 5 points and other students only 1 chance to complete the list.
- Showing Summary: gives students one or a list of 5 points and other students only 1 chance to complete the list.

- Breaking Times: 20-30 minutes
- Presentations: Each participant presents, poses, and discusses results, etc. The goal is to disseminate the work before leaving so that others know what you did, what you learned, what you think about the research question etc. Allow 2-3 questions to engage in discussion. Encourage several different perspectives.
- Share No Results: If I begin by presenting the main/maximum value of the work. Then, as a whole group, evaluate these on the spot using the theory contained in the work. If possible, the results are fully discussed and a final rating is given. After this step, each participant can, in the group and independently, come up with their own ideas and post them. This is a good place to let the participants in the lead of the group. There are usually up to 5 short answer questions and 10-15 multiple choice questions that are mostly 1-2 questions long. Let them answer questions. If there is a higher goal, I will sometimes add 1 multiple choice question to them. I encourage any questions or responses to each group's questions. In the beginning of the work, I control these questions. As the beginning of the work ends, I control these questions. The students are asked to continue their work on their own until the next question is asked.
- Sharing: At the end of the work, each participant is asked to share their results with the group. This is a good opportunity for the group to compare and contrast their results. If your students have had a hard time working in groups then be sure to have enough individuals (including the teacher) for the group to work with the group.
- Sharing: At the end of the work, each participant is asked to share their results with the group. This is a good opportunity for the group to compare and contrast their results. If your students have had a hard time working in groups then be sure to have enough individuals (including the teacher) for the group to work with the group.

- Sharing time for 1st question:
Project 1 students analyze the Team Sheet and discuss on how to share understanding. Teachers input any reading skills that will help group members share the project and how to approach to present reading toward the assignment.
- Share the Team Sheet: The sheet is introduced in a video, students for the team and the teacher can give an opportunity to practice in the presentation in the Team Sheet section. It generally will give students 1-2 minutes to answer these questions, order in 1, and allow them to answer their own questions.
- Sharing Summary: provide 10 minutes of a round of 2 persons, based on student answers on the Team Sheet section.
