Standards-based Report Cards Erik Christian Youngman,2017 Report cards and standards based assessing grading and reporting continue to be relevant topics of focus for educators This qualitative study is based on a problem of practice in a school district in northern Illinois that recently implemented standards based report cards SBRCs This study developed while I was a principal of an elementary school during initial implementation of SBRCs This dissertation expanded from the initial focus on understanding parental perspectives of SBRCs to better understanding the communicative value of SBRCs and professional development that could help parents and teachers The research question that informed this qualitative study is How do parents perceive the strengths and weaknesses of SBRCs The parents in this study provided insight about strengths and challenges of SBRCs and explained why different teacher communication during the SBRC process provided them with a more comprehensive understanding of their child s academic performance in school Effective implementation of SBRCs should maximize comprehensive communication throughout the entire process to enhance parent understanding Findings from this study can be used by school districts to focus their efforts knowledge and professional development on standards based assessing grading and reporting that will directly impact the teaching learning assessing and communicating in schools

Standards-based Report Cards and Effects on Student Achievement Patrick Ketch,2019 This dissertation discusses the influence of Standards Based Report Cards SBRC on student achievement growth and learning The dissertation begins with the history of SBRCs and the purpose they have regarding all stakeholders as well as the learning process Also the dissertation further delves into the utilization and benefits of SBRCs and their effect on student achievement The dissertation includes a debriefing on RtI and its purpose and the inclusion of SBRCs benefits all learners Finally the dissertation utilizes data to prove how Standards Based Report Cards influence all stakeholders and improve a school district providing a clear path to teaching and learning A standard generic report card provides general information regarding student progress assessment and learning SBRCs provide more insight to skills learned or not yet mastered A letter grade does not provide the necessary feedback to enhance student learning as they are only an accumulation of points earned and do not communicate the skills learned or mastered The implementation of SBRCs will further the educational process for all students with clear indicators with the use of rubrics SBRCs provides clear communication to parents or guardians regarding their child's progress SBRCs pinpoint areas of success as well as areas in need of improvement Also they provide meaning to the grades earned by driving instruction to better student engagement while also targeting more rigorous and consistent learning Another advantage of SBRCs is the use of meaningful feedback Teachers can use SBRC indicators and rubrics to provide parents and students with meaningful and purposeful feedback that will help and encourage students to attain mastery on standards being taught ProQuest abstract Teacher and Administrator Perceptions of Standards-based Report Cards Amy E.
