

GEC Measurements

Types CDV22 and CDV62

The type CDV relay is a voltage controlled inverse time overcurrent relay incorporating an instantaneous under-voltage unit. For fault and overload protection of generators, Types CDV22 and CDV62 are single and triple pole versions respectively.

The relay has two operating characteristics determined by the operation of the instantaneous under-voltage unit, monitoring the busbar voltage. On overloads, when the busbar voltage is usually near normal, the relay operates on a long I_{CDV}MT characteristic to match the thermal characteristic of the generator. Under fault conditions, when the busbar voltage falls, the relay operates on a standard I_{CDV}MT characteristic and can be time graded with other I_{CDV}MT relays in the system. The setting is reduced to allow operation on the low value of sustained fault current encountered especially on machines operating without automatic voltage regulation.

CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION

Basically the relay is an induction disc unit type CDG811 base R-523901 with wound shading coils shunted by a resistor giving the long time characteristic.

When the busbar voltage falls under fault conditions, a contact on the under voltage unit short circuits the shading coils, increasing the torque on the disc 2½ times, adjusting the setting current by a factor of 0.4.

There are two standard types of CDV relays.

Type A relays change characteristic at 90% normal voltage and are used where the alternator neutral is solidly earthed. The instantaneous voltage control unit is connected between phases and neutral and the relay operates on both phase and earth faults.

Type B relays change characteristic at 30% normal voltage and are used where the alternator neutral is earthed via a resistor. The instantaneous voltage control unit is connected between phases and the relay operates on overload and phase faults only.
