Friction

1. A student pulls a block of mass m across a horizontal surface. Once gravity and the normal force are included, the student finds the vectors for weight W and normal force N .
- The net force on the block is zero (greater than zero).
 - Evidence for this is constant acceleration.
2. A student pulls P across a block on the table, and enough friction is there.
- The force of friction acting on the block is less than equal to (greater than) P .
 - The net force on the block is zero (greater than zero).
3. Pull P is increased until the block begins to move. It is pulled until it moves with a constant velocity across the floor.
- Friction f is less than (equal to) (greater than) P .
 - Constant velocity means acceleration is zero (greater than zero).
 - The net force on the block is less than (equal to) (greater than) zero.
4. Pull P is further increased until now greater than friction f .
- The net force on the block is less than (greater than) zero.
 - The net force acts parallel the right, so acceleration acts parallel the right.
5. If the pulling force P is 150 N and the block doesn't move, what is the magnitude of f 150 N.
6. If the pulling force P is 2000 N and the block doesn't move, what is the magnitude of f 2000 N.
7. If the force of friction is 200 N, what force is necessary to keep the block sliding at constant velocity? 200 N.
8. If the mass of a block is 100 kg and friction is 200 N, what is the acceleration of the block when the pulling force is 200 N? 10 m/s² 1 m/s² 2000 N/s² 200 N/m².
